

A City's Commitment to Green

Cotati is a city with small town charm located in the Wine Country of Northern California. Residents care deeply about how development affects the environment and the nature of their community. Over the past decade, Cotati has faced this challenge by effectively encouraging growth within strict limitations.

So it would go to follow that this might be the ideal location for the first LEED® (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) certified police facility in the country. The City of Cotati looked to EduTracks to design their LEED education program and to inform the community about sustainable building practices.

The LEED display has been an effective resource for public outreach and education. It supports Cotati's commitment to sustainability and green building and helps to set a precedent for the kind of development we intend for the future.

— Dennis Dorch
Assistant City Manager, Cotati

The display's "pages" provide occupants and visitors with information about the LEED Rating System and how LEED is implemented throughout the facility. EduTracks designed the display and produced a case study report that provided one point for an education program under the "Innovation and Design Process" category for the building's LEED certification.

www.edutracks.com

EduTracks is a trademark of EduTracks. All other brand names, product name, or trademarks belong to their respective holders. Copyright © 2004, EduTracks. All Rights Reserved.